

Victims' Questions to Paige Michael Summers, et al

May 7, 2020

With the launch of this site, many of the victims are praying that you will look at what you have done to each of them and consider the affects your actions have had on their lives, their friends and families, and their finances. Each of these people have opened their hearts and tried to help you have a better life; some have had intimate relationships with you, others have been close friends or given you opportunities when you needed them. Each of them has suffered and been at the brunt of your nasty demanding ways. You have conned everyone in different and/or similar ways; yet you blame them?

What gives you the right to . . .

- Steal their property from them?
- Lie to them about yourself and what you have done?
- Tell them that they are the only one you love, and it is a lie?
- Treat them as if they owe you?
- Force yourself on them sexually?
- Promise to pay them back, and never do?
- Lie about them to others in person and on social media?
- Threaten them in person, on the phone, or in emails and texts?
- Contact them at any hour you want; for whatever you want?
- Call them nasty names when they don't do what you want?
- Use their addresses and business names as your own when you have no authority to do so; and often show up uninvited?
- Continue to run from one victim to another, conning women?
- Never leave them alone after you make them a victim?
- Break the law and lie about it; and keep doing what you do?
- Prey on people's sympathy for free money; and not work?
- Profess to be a Christian and yet act like the devil?

. . . We all pray you will repent and find God, truly.
